FLOOR DEBATE

March 28, 2002 LB 791

Committee. We get these issues. There isn't an issue that comes before the General Affairs, except maybe an electrical code bill or a library bill, that isn't controversial. I'm sure most of you have been to some of our hearings. Very controversial subjects. Oh, you throw in a cemetery once in awhile, but, by golly, let me tell you, once in awhile those are very controversial too. But that's why I'm here today; that's why I'm carrying this bill. I want to protect what the voters put into place. I want to see that those funds do not shrink any further than they have. This is what this bill does. It will not let them slide down any further on the scale than they are, at least for five years. It's worked in other states. Some states have tried to reverse it, go the other way, lost the whole bushel basketful. So I want you to think of what you're doing when you vote to indefinitely postpone this. If it wasn't this bill, Senator Chambers would be working on another bill. He doesn't care. There is something he probably doesn't want to come up. I know Senator Chambers opposes gambling. I'm a very poor gambler. I'm not lucky so I don't get involved.

SENATOR CUDABACK: One minute.

SENATOR JANSSEN: I'll buy a Powerball ticket and that's about the extent of my gambling. Once in awhile I'll go over to the boats and have a good meal, spend ten bucks on a stupid slot machine, and go back home again. My chances there are aren't a heck of a lot better than they are right...taking and buying a scratch ticket. So if we're not on this bill, we're going to be on something else along the way. And Senator Chambers is acknowledging that I am correct in that. So my good friend, Senator Chambers, let me tell you something: don't anybody come crying to me about those funds going dry. We've got something here that will hold us harmless, and if you don't like that, why, then vote against my bill. But I don't want you to see anyone vote for the indefinitely postponed.

SENATOR CUDABACK: Time.

SENATOR JANSSEN: I'm sorry.
